To whom it may concern,

I am deeply concerned at the prospect of the current arrangements of free TV licenses for over 75s ending in 2020.

Many pensioner households rely on the Television for companionship. Many also have mobility issues and thus spend longer periods in the home. I believe that the withdrawal of the free TV license could have a major impact on this and potentially leave some poorer households in a more lonely and vulnerable position.

I believe that the current scheme should continue and that the UK Government should not be trying to shift this responsibility.
