

Sam

Hello, I'm Sam and in this lesson we're going to look at the differences between 'at', 'in' and 'on' for location.

'At' can be used to talk about a single specific location. I'm at work. Or: I'm at the BBC right now.

'On' is used in relation to a surface. I'm sitting on a chair.

And 'in' is used to talk about a three-dimensional space, usually with four walls. It's similar to 'inside'. I'm in a room.

So to help you remember these rules, try to think of a concert:

I'm at the front. The band is on the stage. And my friends are in the crowd.

And where are you right now?
