Approximate distance: 7.5 miles
A linear walk along the spine of Offa’s Dyke to the historic market town of Montgomery and its 13th century castle.

1. Churchtown
52.47887° N, -3.08433° W
Head west from the church and at 40m turn right and cross over a stile. Climb steeply up into the woods for 200m until you arrive at the Offa’s Dyke.

2. Offa’s Dyke path
52.48285° N, -3.0864° W
Follow the dyke path up a steep incline for around 370 metres and cross over a stile and back onto the top of the dyke path.

3. Minor road
52.48739° N, -3.08720° W
After quarter of a mile, follow a path down towards a minor road. Cross over and follow a track parallel to the dyke running down through fields.

4. Wooden footbridge
52.49211° N, -3.08788° W
After a short stroll, cross a wooden foot bridge and turn left. Walk up a rough track for 80 metres and turn right, up a steep, narrow track through Nut Wood.

5. Kerry Ridgeway
52.49927° N, -3.09416° W
At the top you’ll find well preserved sections of the dyke. A little further on, cross over a stile arriving on the Kerry Ridgeway and cross the Welsh/English border.

6. Views over Shropshire Hills
52.50194° N, -3.09468° W
Cross over the road and stile and follow signs for ‘Brompton Bridge. At the end of the field are lovely views over the Shropshire Hills.
7. Road to Cwm
52.50242° N, -3.09462° W
Follow a steep path down along the dyke, through trees and into fields. Turn left onto a minor road for quarter of a mile, arriving at the hamlet of Cwm.

8. Mellington Hall
52.52092° N, -3.09406° W
Cross over a minor road and follow the dyke path, taking a detour to Mellington Hall Hotel (signposted ‘Walkers Welcome’), a Gothic mansion and caravan park.

9. Motte and Bailey Castle
52.53055° N, -3.10544° W
Leaving Mellington Hall, return to the dyke path and head through an archway at Mellington Lodge, onto the B4385. Over the hedge near Bluebell House are the remains of a Motte & Bailey castle.

10. Blue Bell Hotel and oak tree
52.53190° N, -3.10634° W
The Blue Bell Hotel is built on an old drovers’ route. Cross the A489 and turn right after 150 metres towards Brompton Hall house and back onto the dyke path.

11. Old stone engraving - 1969
52.55716° N, -3.12137° W
Follow the dyke (on your right) for a couple of miles along the field boundaries. Near a stile into Lymore Park you’ll spot a stone engraved with 1969, although noone knows how it came to be here.

12. Montgomery Cricket Club
52.55867° N, -3.13155° W
Turn left along a metalled road through Lymore Park and after 700 metres, you’ll arrive at Montgomery Cricket Club, one of the oldest clubs in Britain.

13. Montgomery Castle
52.56317° N, -3.14964° W
At 400m turn left onto a track and join the B4385 to Montgomery. It’s a steep hike up to Montgomery castle but well worth it.
