

THE FLATMATES

Language point:
The first conditional

BBC WORLD SERVICE LEARNING ENGLISH

BBC Learning English – The Flatmates

The Flatmates – The first conditional

You can see this language point online at:

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/worldservice/learningenglish/flatmates/episode24/languagepoint.shtml>

A conditional is used to talk about a possible or imaginary situation (the condition) and the consequences (or the result) of it.

The first conditional - meaning

We use the first conditional to talk about something that will happen (the result), if a particular condition (which is likely to happen) is met. Because the manager is asking Tim to work in the stockroom, it's likely that Tim will do it and that's why we use the first conditional here.

In order to get an interview, Tim has to work in the stockroom.

If you do this for me, you'll have a chance of promotion.

If Tim works in the stock room, he will get an interview.

If Tim doesn't work in the stock room, he won't get an interview.

So, the meaning is that if the condition is met (and it's more than 50% likely to happen) then the result will happen.

The first conditional – form

The first conditional is made up of the condition (the 'if' part of the sentence) and the consequence or the result.

The condition	The consequence or result
If + present simple ,	will + base verb
If Tim works in the stock room	he will get an interview.
If you do this for me,	you'll have a chance of promotion.

Note:

The negative of will is won't.

In spoken English will is usually shortened to 'll.

You can change the order of conditional sentences:

Tim will get an interview if he works in the stock room.

or

If he works in the stockroom, he will get an interview.

The first conditional – Modal verbs will, may and might:

When we use will in the result clause of the first conditional, we are certain that something will happen. It is definite.

But we can use may or might instead of will. This means that the consequence is not certain. It is possible, but not definite.

I'm not feeling very well. If it rains tomorrow, I'll stay at home.

I'm feeling fine and I've got a car. If it rains tomorrow, I might stay at home, or I may go shopping. I'll decide tomorrow.

Note:

In the first conditional, there is no difference in meaning between may and might.

The first conditional – If and if not:

In conditional sentences, you don't always use 'if' or 'if not'. You can use 'provided that' or 'so long as' instead of 'if'. For example:

If you put down the gun, I won't call the police. =

So long as put down the gun, I won't call the police. =

Provided that you put down the gun I won't call the police. = (Provided that is more formal than if)

You can use 'unless' instead of 'if not'. For example:

If you don't put the gun down, I'll call the police. =

Unless you put the gun down, I'll call the police.

Vocabulary:

to look smart or to be well turned out: to wear good clothes and to have tidy hair

a stockroom: the place where a shop keeps the products that are not on display

no guarantees: no definite promises, nothing is certain

Would you like to try an online quiz about this language point? Go to:

<http://bbc.co.uk/worldservice/learningenglish/flatmates/episode24/quiz.shtml>

Or you can download the quiz from:

<http://bbc.co.uk/worldservice/learningenglish/flatmates/episode24/quiz.pdf>